Choosing to Educate Your Children at Home

Alberta Learning believes that enabling parents to choose the schools and/or programs that best suit the needs of their children, no matter where they live in the province, is in the best interest of all Alberta students. In Alberta, all children from the ages of 6 to 16 must attend school. By law, a resident school board is required to serve all students who reside within the district's boundaries. Parents who choose to educate their children at home assume primary responsibility for delivering and supervising their child's courses of study and work, together with a school board or accredited private school to ensure the child's educational goals are being met.

The School Act (Revised Statutes of Alberta (RSA) 2000) includes in the definition of "school", where "... an education program is offered to a student by, iv) a parent giving a home education program." Section 29 of the School Act (RSA 2000) recognizes and reaffirms the parent(s) right to provide a home education program for the student within the parameters of provincial policy, regulation and procedures. Further definitions of students, home education programs and the partnering school board or accredited private school with which parents must work are in Appendix C – Home Education Policy 1.1.2 (pages 14-17).

What Does it Mean to Home Educate?

Home education must be based either on a program that is prescribed, authorized or approved by the Minister under Section 29(1)(a), (b) or (d) of the School Act (RSA 2000), or on a program designed by the parent. If the parent designs a program, the parent must declare that the program is consistent with the student learning outcomes listed in the Schedule in the Home Education Regulation (see Appendix A, page 10).

Unlike attendance at a school operated by a board or private school society, there are no time restrictions as to minimum number of instructional hours or time of day when home instruction takes place. The home education program may be presented to the student on an individual basis or students may be grouped together. The person(s) delivering the program may be the parent(s) or someone the parent has selected.

Parents must work with the supervising board or supervising accredited private school to ensure that students at a level equivalent to grades 3, 6 and 9 write the grades 3, 6 and 9 Provincial Achievement Tests (PATs) (or their equivalents). The supervising board or supervising accredited private school must provide a written report of the progress of the student and include the report in the student's record, which is maintained and retained by the supervising board or supervising accredited private school.

On the recommendation of a school principal, a student in a home education program following a course of studies prescribed, authorized or approved by the Minister under Section 29(1)(a), (b) or (d) of the School Act (RSA 2000) is eligible to receive high school credits if the student achieves the course standards and learning outcomes prescribed by the Minister. The principal of the school or authority sends the student's marks to the Learner Records and Data Exchange in order for the marks to be recorded on the student's transcript.

Questions and Answers

Do parents have a right to home educate their children?

Yes. Section 29 of the School Act recognizes a parent's right to provide a home education program.

Do parents have to work through their local (resident) school board?

No. Parents may notify any school board or accredited private school that is willing to supervise the home education program. However, all home education programs must be under the supervision of a school board or an accredited private school.

Is funding available to parents for home education in Alberta?

Yes. For the 2002/2003 school year, supervising school boards and private schools receive $1,121 for each home education student. The supervising authority is required to offer not less than 50% of that amount, or $560, to the parent for the purchase of Programs of Study and instructional material. Receipts must be provided.

Does a school board or accredited private school receive additional funding from Alberta Learning for home education students?

Yes. Additional funding may be provided to the supervising board for home education students in grades 1 to 6 taking a full course load of Alberta Distance Learning Centre (ADLC) courses where the total compulsory course costs exceed the 50% funding provided by the supervising board to the home education parents.

Additional funding may be provided for home education students in grades 7 to 12 who are enrolled in the Alberta Program of Studies through the ADLC or through the Distance Education Consortia operated by the supervising board or accredited private school. The amount eligible for support is $1,121 plus 50% of the cost of the registration fees and compulsory learning materials for these courses to a maximum of $1,121 per student.

How much money does a home educator receive from the supervising board or accredited private school?

A supervising board or accredited private school must offer, in money, not less than 50% of the funding it receives from Alberta Learning.

Do home education students have access to severe disabilities funding?

No. Students enrolled in home education programs are not eligible for severe disabilities funding unless there are extenuating circumstances and prior approval has been obtained by submitting the request to the Director of the Special Programs Branch, Alberta Learning.

Can parents spend the parent portion of the funds on what they want?

No. The funding must only be used to purchase Programs of Study or other resources related to the home education program or for small group instruction. Section 8(4)(b) of the Home Education Regulation requires parents to provide the supervising board or supervising accredited private school with receipts. A parent cannot use the money for personal remuneration, or to pay travel costs or other expenses usually required to be paid by the parent of the student enrolled in school.

Does a home educator have to use the Alberta Program of Studies?

No. Home educators may choose to use curriculum, resources and methodology other than those outlined in the Alberta Program of Studies. Parents have the right to choose an education program for the student that is consistent with the family's religious and conscientiously-held beliefs. However, the province has a compelling interest in the education of all children and students, and home educators must ensure that the education being received at home meets the expectations set out by the Minister of Learning and prepares students to live in today's society.

What are the school board's and accredited private school's responsibilities?

Supervising boards and accredited private schools are required to develop a home education policy that includes guidelines for the supervision of home education students and for the use of school facilities and equipment and participation in school activities and extra-curricular activities. Other policy guidelines include the allocation of the parent portion of the home education funding.

School boards are responsible for assigning teachers to conduct at least two evaluations in each school year, including a review of the student portfolio with the parent at least twice a year.

School boards must notify the parent of any limitations a particular program choice may have on the student being granted credits or eligibility to write the grade 12 diploma examinations (see Appendix A, page 7).

What are the parent's responsibilities?

A parent who provides a home education program to a student must develop, administer and manage a home education program that will enable the student to achieve the learning outcomes described in the Home Education Regulation Schedule (see Appendix A, page 10).

The parent is responsible for regularly evaluating the progress of the student toward the achievement of these outcomes by maintaining a portfolio of student work and maintaining a record of the method and time of evaluation.

The parent also must ensure that the student is available in order that the supervising board or accredited private school may evaluate the progress of the student.

What are the student's responsibilities?

A student registered in a home education program is responsible for meeting the learning outcomes described in the Schedule (see Appendix A, page 10). The student also must write Provincial Achievement Tests (PATs) or their equivalents for grades 3, 6 and 9.

Does a student have to write formal evaluations?

Yes. Section 4(2)(a) of the Home Education Regulation requires the student to write either the PATs or an “alternative evaluation that reflects standards similar to the PATs and that meets the student learning outcomes prescribed in the Schedule,” which is a part of the Home Education Regulation (see Appendix A, pages 7 and 10).

Who determines which “alternative evaluation” is used if home education students do not write the Provincial Achievement Tests?

Section 4(3) of the Home Education Regulation requires the superintendent of the supervising board, or the principal of the supervising accredited private school, to approve the alternative evaluation (see Appendix A, page 7). The superintendent or the principal, in consultation with the home education parent, will judge the merits of the alternative evaluation. Acceptable and excellent standards are described in the Achievement Test Bulletins and in the Alberta Program of Studies. The supervising board or accredited private school has the responsibility to ensure each student’s progress is evaluated and reported.

What happens if a home education student refuses to write either the Provincial Achievement Tests (PATs) or the alternative evaluation?

Section 4(2) (b) of the Home Education Regulation requires the supervising board or supervising accredited private school to provide a written report of the student’s progress and include it in the student’s record if the student does not write the PATs or the alternative evaluation. It is the responsibility of the supervising board or supervising accredited private school to ensure that student progress for grades 3, 6 and 9 is evaluated and reported in the student record (see Appendix A, page 7).

Can a supervising board or supervising accredited private school terminate a home education program?

Yes. Section 6 of the Home Education Regulation describes the process for terminating a home education program. A supervising board or supervising accredited private school that terminates a home education program is responsible for the student’s education for the remainder of the school year and must make suitable arrangements for the student’s access to an education program (see Appendix A, page 8).

Who is on the Minister’s Advisory Committee for Home Education?

The Advisory Committee includes the President of the Alberta Home Education Association, two home education parents, the Executive Director of the Association of Independent Schools and Colleges in Alberta, three representatives of the Network of Home Education Supervisors and a superintendent of schools representing the College of Alberta School Superintendents.

Appendix C

Home Education Policy 1.1.2

From the Policy, Regulations and Forms Manual

Approved: August 30, 2000

BACKGROUND

Parents have a right and a responsibility to make decisions regarding the education of their children. Parents may choose to exercise this responsibility through a home education program with assistance from and under the supervision of a school board or an accredited private school in order to ensure that their child will have the opportunity to meet standards of education acceptable to the Minister. Section 29 of the School Act recognizes and reaffirms the parents' right to provide a home education program for their child within the parameters of provincial policy, regulation and procedures.

Parents of a student enrolled in a regular school program may choose to provide a home education program for their child at any time. It is the responsibility of the supervising board or accredited private school to ensure the student has access to an education program as per Section 8 of the School Act.

POLICY

In order to provide choice in type of school, Alberta Learning recognizes that, under the supervision of a board or an accredited private school, parents have the right to choose home education for their children. The province has a compelling interest in the education of all children and has a responsibility to evaluate the student's progress to ensure the student has achieved acceptable provincial standards.
